-Spectator Notes-

After about a year of very hard work, the traffic committee of the Carmel Business Association is making real headway towards getting a parking lot for downtown Carmel. Nothing definite has been done as yet, but the group is in the negotiating stage for some property that will fill the bill.

At last! Now Dolores street from 6th to the Post Office is completely paved. Instead of a marsh in the middle of the block, it's all sidewalk. Now you can look into Bishop-Kneedler's instead of watching for the puddles.

Speaking of Dolores street, yesterday the Carmel Realty office moved into the old post office building. The office has been on its Ocean avenue location since it was formed before the First World War. Corum Jackson, the present proprietor, joined the firm in 1932 and took over during the last war.

Master sergeant Verlan Raglan of Fort Ord had the questionable pleasure of hauling in a 57 pound octopus. . . . THE catch of the Monterey Fishing Derby so far. The pus was 12 feet 4 inches in diameter, and the sergeant is from Arlington, Texas. The octopus was from Point Pinos.

Al Fry was honored by the Lions Club at their regular Tuesday meeting. They bade the popular Carmel hotelman farewell. La Playa has been leased, and it is understood locally that Al will return to the Army, at least for a time.

Cerrito's at the Wharf opened to the public last night. Revamped by Bill Cranston, the Carmel architect, the ex-Pop Ernest's restaurant looks fine, and features a boat theme. The dining sections extend out over the waters of the wharf, and the cocktail department is to the rear. The ladies' and men's rooms, always a point of interest, are in the bow, to port, mates.

The Budd trailer company took a peek into the future in their ad in Time magazine last week. They saw the Coast Highway south of Bixby Creek as a roomy three-lane affair bustling with heavy traffic.

An Editorial-

Congressman Ernest K. Bramblett has been in town for the last couple of days. It would appear that since he has returned home he has had ample time to answer the question all thoughtful voters have had on their minds. Bramblett owes it to the voters of the Peninsula to answer that question.

The question is, "What, Mr. Bramblett, have you done in your six years as our Congressman in Washington?" The answer, of course, would be "very little," so Bramblett is unwilling to give it.

We are very glad to note that Bramblett's eager committee points out that he is "100 per cent American." That's fine. But Congressmen are supposed to do more than sit around their offices talking to their wives about upholding the constitution and agreeing that Communism, Socialism and Nazism won't work. A good Congressman does something positive. He drafts bills. He makes speeches. He knows people. He sees people. He gets things done.

Bramblett and his committee have not yet produced any examples of positive action that have aided this district or the Peninsula, let alone the nation as a whole.

It would seem that six years is enough of a trial. Bramblett has failed the voters of this district.

This being a crucial election year, the Republican County Central Committee owed it to their party to field the strongest candidate they could find. Instead they voted to support Bramblett in the June 3 primary election, an action which violates the state law, according to the State Attorney General. The move was made after a strong Republican candidate, James L. Holmes, appeared in the primary race.

Holmes promises to do something if he is elected. Judging from his background, he will do something. He will make the district's wishes known and felt in Congress.

It may be nice to have a Congressman from your home community in Washington, but if he doesn't do anything, he is certainly no asset. What is needed in Congress is a worker.

Holmes promises to be the kind of representative who will see to it that the Peninsula's problems are given a fair hearing in the capital. Holmes promises to be "100 per cent American" too. But he won't be content to sit in the back benches and compile an "excellent voting record." He won't be just one of 400-odd votes. He promises to be a Congressman in every sense of the word, which simply means he will get things done for the Peninsula.

It's time we had such a Congressman. And it's time for the Republicans to name the strongest candidate they can for the fall election. Bramblett's weak position will be even weaker when the voters are thoroughly roused in November.

Village Week

VITAL ELECTION

Next Tuesday the voters of California will troop to the polls for the primary election. Peninsula citizens will also have purely local positions to fill. The primary election is actually as important as the general election in the fall.

The primary election was originally designed to allow the voters of each party to select their own candidates for the fall election. Under the California cross-filing system this plan has been somewhat broken down - making it possible for a candidate to win both parties' nominations, thereby assuring election in the fall.

At the top of the ballot will be the choice of delegates to the national convention. This is the so-called "presidential primary ballot," as distinguished from the regular primary ballot.

The primary will include candidates for U.S. Senator, U.S. Representative for the 13th District, State Senator, State Assembly, as well as the membership of the county central committees.

On a strictly local level, voters will have to choose candidates for the justice of the municipal court and the supervisor from this district.

Also, the voters must decide on the question of fluoridation of the local water supply--an advisory question.

This is an important election. It is vital that all registered voters go to the polls, not only to vote on the men to fill national offices but to vote for men who will be acting on a strictly local level.

ADDITION FOR WOODS

If everything goes according to plans, double-sessions at Woods School will not be necessary next fall. Plans for a multi-purpose room at the school have been approved by state authorities and bids on the project will be opened June 13.

Thomas S. Elston, Jr., architect for the job, explained that if work can start immediately the contractor has 90 days to finish the work.

This addition to the school, part of the expansion program planned several years ago, will be built with monies saved by the district from current operating costs.

TEMPORARY WATER RATE INCREASE IS DENIED

The fact that the California Water and Telephone Company's request for a temporary rate increase was denied is good news for The Peninsula. The Public Utilities Commission of California decided that a rate increase was not necessary pending the outcome of the petition by the company for a 40% rate hike.

The application for a temporary increase was based on the contention that more revenue was needed by the company immediately--before the rate increase application problem could be heard and studied.

Failure on the part of the company to furnish an adequate cost study was the reason the temporary rate increase was denied.

In the opinion by the P.U.C. the water company was ordered to submit such a cost analysis. It urged that such a study be presented at the next

Tickets, all unreserved at popular prices (half price for children at matinee) will be sold by Graham's and Browse Around music stores in Carmel; Abinante's in Monterey, and Coleman's Music Company in Pacific Grove.

A REVIEW - 'THE INNOCENTS'

"The Innocents," William Archibald's adaptation of Henry James' "Turn of the Screw" tale, opened at the Wharf last weekend. Styled "an eerie" play by the program, it is the story of a governess and her two charges, none of them common. The children are scarred by their previous governess and a valet, both deceased, who, it is alluded, taught the small-fry unnatural practices. The current governess, Miss Giddens, is something of a problem herself, since she is hinted to be an advanced case of Victorian repression. In the original story the fight, between the governess and the spooks which come back to claim and pervert the children, is a moot one. The story is written so as to leave very much in the air the question of who is actually off their trolley, the governess or the children.

The play, through the use of visual spooks, vindicates the governess... since the audience sees the ghosts, the haunting process is obviously not a figment of her imagination. This gelding process heightens the play dramatically, but polishes off any speculation on the part of the audience. The book offered a pay your money and take your choice proposition, while in the play there is no doubt about it--spooks are definitely abroad.

The four man cast at the Wharf did a remarkably competent job. Linda Pollard, a prodigiously remarkable child, was excellent as Flora, the younger and less affected of the children. Dee Olivetti, as the governess, was fine, and Mary Buckner as Mrs. Grose, the housekeeper, was competent. Robert Carson, as Miles, the older and more twisted of the children, gave a reasonable simulation of a sly fifteen year old. That the play does not quite come off is none of their faults, but must be laid to its direction.

An excess of dissonant music and green spot lights is primarily to blame for an anti-climactic feeling which dogs the production. From the first act on all stops are out... blocks thump, ghost music mounts and lights eerie all over the place, so that instead of a mounting drama by insinuation, one is reminded of Helzapoppin. There are in all eight scenes. Since every one of them ends in a cliff-hanger, the audience is more exhausted than intrigued by the time the final scene rolls around. This is a most obvious production of a play whose essence lies in implication and indirection.

It is suggested that the director light the stage more generously... that he appreciate that the impact of ghostly shadows will benefit by contrast with normality and light, and that he encourage his cast, particularly Robert Carson, to underplay their roles, to save something for the crashing final scene that hasn't been used before. Above all... let the appearance of the ghost of Quint, the dead valet, appear unheralded, minus the Dracula music and heart thumping percussion of the Wharf's record collection.

The next meeting is scheduled for next Monday at 8 p.m. in the Carmel High School lounge. An auction will be held as part of the program. All interested are invited.

It could hardly be made plainer than by the accompanying photo that the Steve Crouch family is a trio of pictorialists. The only necessary footnote is that Cookie, Steve's photogenic wife, is a portrait painter who didn't have her brushes and canvas handy when all this picture-taking occurred. The youngster, Stevie, more than follows his dad's footsteps; he's the old man's junior partner, holding a flashlamp extension whenever his father's assignments require it.

Anyone strolling around the Village this week--even those who cannot read--must be aware that Steve's polished work of camera art, "Peninsula Pictorial," is fresh off the W. T. Lee press in Monterey and at some local newsstands is already "fresh out."

As a 40-page folio packed with several dozen of his choicest photographs that savor discriminatingly the life and lure of the Monterey Peninsula, this book represents Crouch's debut as an author.

"Not until just now," he confessed, "did I ever have much sympathy for writers sweating out the first inklings of public response to their work. I've learned exactly what it's like."

Captioned adequately to present the Peninsula graphically to residents and interpret it clearly to visitors, the pictorial seems destined to become a popular souvenir and, as years roll by, a treasured one. In it the best of Steve's skillful lens work is effectively arranged to offer a broad variety of content and to produce--as only a camera can--a series of pleasing, lasting impacts upon readers.

You could have arrived here in 1903 or at half-past 3 and in either case find within this folio a really refreshing viewpoint on one of the world's most-photographed scenes.

Since birth of The Spectator and ever since the close of World War II in other periodicals the credit-line "Steve Crouch photo" has been familiar to all who look at pictures--and that's everyone. Spectator readers will instantly recall numerous cover pictures by this well-established Carmel photographer.

The fact that Crouch has brought out a successful collection of scenic and portrait photos should not suggest he swings his camera only in these two directions. He is an all-around photographer to the extent of "doing" everything from politicians hot on the rostrum and objets d'art hot from the kiln to double-ring ceremony weddings (including shivarees) and intricate color shots of many sorts.

It all began--Steve doesn't recall when. Photography has been with him the outgrowth of

1. Andy has a great record... 20 years of honest and intelligent service as Supervisor for the Fifth District.
2. He is Chairman of the Board of Supervisors and as such has the confidence, respect and COOPERATION of other members.
3. The rapid growth and increasing needs of the Monterey Peninsula demand the best possible representation; Andy's experience, judgment and influence meet this all-important requirement.
4. Andy has the time for the job; more and more time will be needed.
5. This is no time for a change; a change doesn't necessarily guarantee improvement.
6. Andy's continued guidance will be invaluable during the changeover period to management form of government.

a boyhood hobby. He got serious about it soon after V-J Day in this manner, as he explains it simply: "Buying flashbulbs on a major's pay in the Army was easy enough; affording them on a civilian's income after I got out was only possible by becoming a professional."

The Army busied Crouch continuously as an artillery officer from 1938 until 1945 with one brief interlude. That was during 1939 when between hitches he became principal of a school in the metropolis of Mangum, Oklahoma (he's quick to stress that he's a native Texan). He and Cookie had met and wed at Fort Sill; Stevie came into the world at Mangum.

Island-hopping in the Pacific theater culminated in one moment of combat Steve probably would like to forget: the time an enemy paratroop drop suddenly found him pinned down by sniper fire in the shelter of several drums of high-octane aviation fuel. He can still hear Nipponese 50-caliber slugs clanging around those barrels -- and is everlastingly thankful Uncle Sam wrapped up gasoline in good heavy-guage steel. A bronze star was awarded him for his part in rescuing Filipino refugees from starvation during the Leyte campaign.

Settling in Carmel was a duck-takes-to-water process for the Crouches. Steve found the place while stationed at Fort Ord; it appealed to him and to Cookie like nowhere else. They're settled now to the extent that besides his photography and her painting they manage the Carmel Art Association Gallery as co-curators. This absorbing task began almost three years ago and they find themselves increasingly busy handling a heavy schedule of exhibits.

No one seems to recall the Crouches ever taking a vacation from Carmel during all their years here. Obvious reasons are (1) Steve has people after him 365 days annually to shoot pictures for them, (2) for Cookie the Village is an oasis in a world laden with hay fever, and (3) they're too fond of the place.

An Arthur McEwen photo and story.

ALWAYS BE CAREFUL DRIVING

The car that wears its own Sun Glasses

You find this "eye shade" band of darker color only on the genuine "Easy-Eye Glass" pioneered by Buick, and all glass used in Buicks is ripple-free, ground and polished plate safety glass.

2-door, 6-passenger Super Riviera.

YOU may have to look twice to see it—but a lot of the new Buicks have a soft blue-green tone in all glass areas—plus a slightly darker band which shades down from the top of the windshield.

And you have no idea what comfort all this adds to hot-weather driving.

Its name is "Easy-Eye Glass"†—which tells only half the story. While it filters out 18% of the glare (and tones down the dazzle of oncoming headlights at night)—it also cuts down sun-heat as much as 50%.

So it's the best cure we know for hot laps in summer driving, when the sun beats down on the windshield.

Maybe you'd like to try this out before you buy your next car.

And while you're trying it out—you can also discover how it feels to boss around a Fireball 8 Engine, that puts its own exclusive added wallop into a high-compression valve-in-head power plant.

You can sample the sure-footed way a Buick settles into a curve—the way the front wheels seem to seek their course automatically—the smooth surge and falterless ease with which Dynaflow Drive* feeds the power—the level confidence of Buick's million dollar ride.

You can get an idea also of the room, the comfort, the smartness, the thrill that your dollars buy in this brilliant performer.

So why not arrange for a demonstration soon?

PLAY AGAINST BEN

Tomorrow has been set aside as National Golf Day sponsored by Life and the Professional Golfers Association.

Del Monte's four courses--Pebble Beach, Cypress Point, Monterey Peninsula Country Club, and Del Monte--are participating in the event.

The entry fee is $1 (plus green fees). Fifty cents goes to the USO and 50¢ to establish a P.G.A. National Golf Fund.

Each golfer entered will play against Ben Hogan, who will step to the tee at the Northwood Club in Dallas tomorrow, accompanied by an official scorer and surrounded by Life cameramen. Hogan, who has won every major tournament in American golf, will play 18 holes, and each golfer entered in the event, playing on the thousands of courses in the country, will match his card against Hogan's, subtracting his handicap from the medal score. If he beats Hogan's Life card, he wins a Life National Golf Day Medal.

Local golfers are urged to enter this event for the fun involved and for the worthy cause.

DOG SHOW NEXT SATURDAY

Entries for the Del Monte Dog Show to be held at Del Monte Lodge, Pebble Beach, next Saturday, June 7, have begun to roll in, and Secretary Derek Rayne reports that if the entries already received are any indication the show promises to be the largest in the history of the club.

A distinguished group of judges, including two from the East coast, has been assembled in order to assure owners and handlers the finest and most impartial judging possible. The judges are Miss Jean G. Hinkle of Osterville, Massachusetts, who will make the selection of the Best of Breed and Best Local Dog; Mrs. Winifred L. Heckman, Towson, Maryland; Mrs. Kenneth Fitzpatrick, Encino; Mr. O. C. Harriman, Beverly Hills; Mr. Sid Etherden, Culver City; Mr. Lewis H. Starkey, Pasadena.

Mrs. Elizabeth C. Boyer offers the President's Silver trophy for Best of Show and Mrs. Charles H. Rayne offers silver candelabra for Best Local Dog. In addition, there is a complete list of trophies and awards in every official class or group.

Officers of the Del Monte Kennel Club are Mrs. Elizabeth Boyer, president; Mrs. John E. Craige, vice-president; Henry Tiedemann, treasurer; Derek G. Rayne, secretary (Box 2251, Carmel, Calif.)

SAFE WATER

This Laboratory Is For Your Protection

One of the primary functions of your water company is to see that the water delivered to you is absolutely safe.

To begin with, your water system operates under license issued by the California State Board of Health, and water is examined weekly by inspectors of the Monterey County Health Board.

In general, these safeguards would be sufficient to assure safe water, but your company goes a step farther. It maintains two fully equipped laboratories of its own for extra safety—one on the Peninsula at the Filter Plant, shown in the photograph above, and one at Palm City in San Diego County.

For your protection, bacteriological analyses of water, taken from many points in the system, are made each week in the Filter Plant laboratory—and duplicate samples are examined in the laboratory at Palm City to provide a double check. In addition to the bacteriological analyses, other examinations are conducted regularly, such as chemical composition tests, studies of plankton growths, etc. Special investigations are made whenever conditions warrant. Reports of all laboratory examinations are on file at our Monterey office and are available to everyone.

This protective phase of water works management is important — it indicates the great care that is exercised daily to provide you with the best possible service.

carmel library notes

A unique subject is tackled by Peter Lum in Fabulous Beasts. The author traces the mythological history of unicorns, dragons, mermaids, gryphons, etc., from earliest times to their symbolic significance in cultures of today.

Television Writing is explained by Robert S. Greene in his new book. This was written to aid the radio writer in breaking into television and to acquaint the professional writer with the technical requirements of the medium. He has included a complete script, fully analyzed, and a glossary.

Alexander Weissberg, a world-renowned physicist, has written of his three years in Russian prisons in The Accused. Before his arrest as a political conspirator, Weissberg was director of the Ukranian Physical Technical Institute in Kharkov. His book details the methods used by the Russians to force confessions and his own disillusion with the Communist party which he had joined many years before in his native Austria.

English writer Beverly Nichols has a new book of personal history, All I Could Never Be. Nichols has a lighthearted approach and a disinclination to take himself or his many famous friends very seriously.

The Modern Novel in America is dissected by Frederick J. Hoffman who is an associate professor of English at the University of Wisconsin. Hoffman's book covers the years from 1900 to 1950 with particular emphasis on the two most apparent trends in American writing -- that toward realism and that toward art and technique. It is his feeling that eventually the twain shall meet and authors will emerge not only with something to say but with the means of saying it effectively and artistically.

English author Graham Greene departs from his usual fictional metier with a new book of literary criticisms and personal sketches called The Lost Childhood. He also furnishes the introduction for The Autobiography of a Hunted Priest, by John Gerard. This is a translation from the Latin, by Philip Caraman, and tells

Earl Warren has the backing of leaders in agriculture, labor, government, business, professional, and veteran's affairs. These people and every member of the Warren delegation agree with Earl Warren when he says,

"I believe with all my heart that we must have a new administration in Washington next year—not a warmed over Democratic administration, not a re-shuffling of the cards for another kind of deal, but a completely new administration with a new approach, new leadership, a new sense of responsibility to the people, and with the will to restore time honored concepts of representative government."

GARDENING FOR HEALTH AND HAPPINESS

By CHARLES W. DELANEY

HOW TO TREAT CUT FLOWERS FOR USE IN THE HOUSE

Some flowers require special methods to prolong their life in the house. Most flowers need no special treatment, if they are kept in fresh water and if it is changed daily and, in re-arranging them, an inch or two is cut off the stems.

Flowers last longer if they are cut early in the morning or late in the evening. Have a bucket or large pitcher full of cold water, plunge the entire stem up to the flower in the water and be sure to keep them out of hot sun or a draft. It is better to set the container in a dark place until you are ready to arrange the flowers. The expert exhibitors follow the above routine and it is well to follow this same routine if you are contemplating exhibiting in the Monterey County Fair and Flower Show in August. Flowers for exhibition must be in perfect condition and must never look wilted or straggly.

SPECIAL TREATMENT FOR CERTAIN FLOWERS

Amaryllis, marguerites, gladioli, and marigolds: Add a half teaspoonful of peppermint extract to each quart of fresh water in the vase or container.

Asters: a level teaspoonful of sugar to each quart of water will brighten and prolong the life of asters.

Apple blossoms, crab apple, azaleas, cannas: split the stems an inch or more, dip in a quart of water to which three drops of 10% Hydrochloric Acid have been added, let the stems soak for two or three hours before using in arrangements.

Camellias: add a pinch of salt to the water in the vase or dish.

Hydrangeas, dahlias, roses, shasta daisies: burn the stems over a gas flame or use a candle flame, then place in deep water.

Stocks: Crush the stems with a hammer or use a pair of pliers; then put in deep water for two hours before making the flower arrangement.

Chrysanthemums, daisies, and marguerites: first strip off leaves along the stems, then add a teaspoonful of Clorox to each quart of water. The flowers will keep from 10 to 14 days and the water will not become rancid; but a daily change of water is better for the flowers.

Now is the time to plan for the flower show and the duties in the garden will require special attention to watering, fertilizing, and pest control. The money prizes are generous and receiving blue ribbons is a thrill which every one enjoys. Much can be learned as well as enjoyed at the flower show, so be sure to plan several entries.

the story of a Jesuit priest in Elizabethan England.

A book of fascinating true stories is The World's 30 Greatest Women Spies by Kurt Singer. James Norman Hall, who went to Tahiti in 1920, has a new book of stories about the interesting characters he met there called The Forgotten One.

Esquire magazine's travel editor, Richard Joseph, has published a new edition of the World Wide Travel Book. This is a complete guide with detailed instructions on what to wear, what to see, etc. It even has a chapter by Dr. Morris Fishbein on How to Stay Healthy While Travelling.

The College from Within, by Monroe E. Deutsch, is a study by a leading educator and administrator of our American universities with many suggestions for their improvement.

A quantity of new fiction goes into circulation this week. The book receiving the highest critical acclaim is Marcel Ayme's satirical novel, The Second Face. Three novels deal with family life in widely divergent settings: Hollis Summers' Brighten the Corner is a story about a minister's family in a small American town; Lau Shaw's The Drum Singers takes place in China, opening in the year 1938, and The Sundowners by Jon Cleary is a novel of an Australian sheep-herding family.

Two of the new fictional additions deal with the Negro's position in America--Langston Hughes' book of short stories, Laughing to Keep from Crying, and Ralph Ellison's Invisible Man.

A new humorous novel of little theatre activities is Tempest Tost by Robertson Davies.

England in 1768 is the setting of Crown Without Sceptre by Vaughn Wilkins. This author's And So, Victoria was a highly successful novel of several years ago.

Julius Berstl has written a novel based on the life of Saint Paul, The Tentmaker. Richard Brooks, who spent eight years as a scenario writer in Hollywood, has written the saga of a movie tycoon in The Producer.

John Burress' Little Mule is the story of a poor Missouri family (one without Washington connections, evidently), told from the viewpoint of a growing boy.

The week's mystery addition is a Jess Roden puzzler by A. B. Cunningham called Strange Return.
